3 lecture hours, 0.5 course

Antirequisite(s): None

The course is jointly organized by Western University, the Chinese University of Hong Kong, and Chongqing University in China. The Course Syllabus in draft form can be viewed at the course OWL site and the updated versions will be posted in the same folder on OWL when they become available. Please print hard copies of the final syllabus, field exercises, and other relevant materials and bring them with you in the field.

Prerequisite checking is the student's responsibility

2.2. Senate Regulations

Senate Regulations state, "unless you have either the requisites for this course or written special permission from your Dean to enroll in it, you will be removed from this course and it will be deleted from your record. This decision may not be appealed. You will receive no adjustment to your fees in the event that you are dropped from a course for failing to have the necessary prerequisites."

3. Introduction

This field course will take students to Southwestern China along the Yangtze River. Students are expected to get first hand experience from four aspects; physical geography, human geography, urban issues and resources management.

The Yangtze River becomes substantially more powerful after passing the Sichuan Basin and creates astonishing gorges. Water management is crucial to utilize the water resource for the benefits of irrigation and other consumption activities, flood and drought control, transportation, and hydropower. To study these aspects, we will visit the world largest hydraulic engineering project, the Three Gorges Dam, together with a cruise trip along the Three Gorges.

Like other regions in China, the local culture is fascinating and adapts to the local environment. We will examine authentic Chongqing hotpot and Hubei cuisine and explore why the food there is different from other parts of China. We will also investigate ancient poems on this region and use them as references to today's situations. Many items of cultural heritage in the three Gorges were below the flooding line when the Dam was put into use. A variety of methods were used to rescue more important ones. We will visit a few featured heritage sites to learn about the principles and techniques for their protection.

The region is densely populated. This trip will lead students into two metropolises, Chongqing and Wuhan, to retrieve first-hand information on their development and planning. Students are expected to compare the two cities, one hilly and one flat.

4. Budget

Students are expected to pay for the airfare and food. Accommodations and inland travel are funded by a donation from Dr. Cecilia Yau, a WesternU geography alumna and a highly accomplished Asian business leader, in honour of Dr. Elaine Bjorklund, Professor Emerita of our department.

Students are encouraged to seek funding opportunities that would cover a large part, if not all of your expenses for airfare and food, perhaps other costs depending on individual circumstances, such as t expenses of trip and health insurance, travel vaccines, and personal lifestyle needs. To apply, visit the International Learning website, Going Abroad Western Awards. The department will arrange to provide invitation letters for every trip participant to help obtain passport and visa for travel to China. If you have specific medical or dietary needs, please inform Dr. Gordon as soon as possible.

5. Learning Activities

As this is a credit-earning trip, students will fulfill the following tasks under the guidance of the trip leaders and/or the TAs:

- Pre-trip preparations including readings and map studies
- During the trip (collecting first-hand data)
  - Observation
  - Interviews
  - Group presentation
- After the trip (data analysis)
  - Field trip report

6. Evaluation

Students are required to attend all meetings punctually, before, during, and after the trip. Students are responsible for material covered and for completion and submission of all the assignments as specified. A collegial and courteous manner is expected from all participants throughout this course, especially when you are interacting with the professors and students from the Chinese University of Hong Kong, Chongqing University, and Wuhan University, so that everyone involved can benefit from an in-depth exchange.

Evaluation Components	Percentage of Course Grade	Assignment Schedule
Pre-trip meetings / Assessments	20%	May 17 May 28
Participation during the trip	10%	June 6
In-trip Group Presentation	10%	June 3
Individual post-trip report	60%	June 30

Pre-trip Assessments

- Meeting attendance and notes as well as actions taken following every session
- Submitted statement of research interest
- The Yangtze River basin and the area of the trip
- Geographical context of the Three Gorges Dam
- Chongqing and Wuhan environments
- Use of WeChat and Pleco for ease of communications in the field

In-trip group presentation

Date and time: Monday, June 3rd, 2019, 7pm-9pm

Venue: Upper deck of the cruise ship

The two hours have two sections. The first session will take one hour. Each student should present their fieldwork up to that point and assess to what extent their original research design has been achieved, whether the methodology is adequate to achieve research goals, what are the gaps and difficulties. The presentations will be organized within groups. Each student will have six minutes and should prepare one or up to three slides (on paper or with a laptop). The remaining time of the hour will be devoted to intra-group discussion. Each group should identify three strengths and three difficulties in first-hand data collection. The second section will be used for inter-group discussion. Each group will present their three strengths and three difficulties in no more than five minutes. Following each presentation, the same critique groups as in the pre-trip group presentation will provide comments with one minute for each group.

Individual Field Report

Submit to course OWL "Drop Box".

There are four parts for the post-trip report as indicated below:

- Diagrams (manual or scanned) and Notes: activities/subjects for each day 10%
- Photos and Comments: 50 minimum field trip photos, brief identifications/comments 10%
- Observations and Reflections: Reported observations of the trip highlights (500-1000 words in length). Use your own field notes along with other resources to support your interpretation and discussion of the site(s) visited on the trip; you might find it helpful to organize around a particular theme or themes. Your report will be evaluated for insights and use of evidence 10%
- Final Report 30%. The final report must primarily rely on first-hand data from the upcoming fieldwork. Simple observation is not counted as a methodology. The deadline for submitting the final reports will be June 30th, 2019. The length of the report should be 2000~2500 words. Standard academic writing formats are expected. The grading will be based on the following criteria: (1) clear introduction of the research background, literature and question (20%), (2) sound methodology and first-hand quantitative/qualitative data collection in the fieldtrip (20%), (3) credible data analysis (40%), (4) sound conclusion and discussion (10%) and (5) rigorous academic writing (10%).

Research Groups

You have been put into groups. Each group has a randomly designated group leader, as marked in bold red in the Table posted on OWL.
